A New Way of Communicating

Welcome to the first Russell Scanlan electronic newsletter.

We have seen a dramatic rise in the use of e-mail as an accepted method of communication and this has led us to adopt the same format to improve the way we pass information to you.

Our intention is to use regular electronic newsletters to keep in touch with you and to keep you abreast of any developments concerning insurance, relevant legislation, risk management and other important issues and to allow feedback from you on any aspect of our service.

At the same time we have redesigned our website www.rsib.co.uk to enable us to promote and explain the services we have available. The site also makes it easier for you to contact us and provides a comprehensive list of insurance company claim help-lines.

If you feel that anyone else within your organisation would benefit from receiving our newsletter please click on this link and complete the brief registration form.

Communication is important so we would appreciate any feedback you can give us in respect of the newsletter or any other part of our service. Just click on this link to complete the feedback form – all comments made will be read and replied to.
